

Architectural History

Services

- Architectural Survey
- Historic Structure Reports
- DOE/AOE
- HABS/HAER/HALS
- National Register Nominations

Architectural history is the study of historic buildings, structures, objects, and other aspects of the built environment. NSA's architectural historians specialize in researching and documenting these types of resources through archival research, surveys and inventories, photo documentation, measured drawings, and even engineering drawings. These studies help Federal and state agencies comply with local, state, and Federal preservation laws. They also can help communities and property owners better understand the history and potential significance of their historic buildings.

Why Choose NSA

- State of the art digital survey capabilities and GIS technology
- Secretary of the Interior qualified professional historians and architectural historians
- Expertise in navigating state and Federal preservation laws and regulations
